CSUN to Host 2000 Distinguished Alumni Awards Ceremony

Honorees to Include Michael Day, Bill Griffeth, Irene Tovar and Edmund Peckham

Cal State Northridge will present its 2000 Distinguished Alumni Awards to Caltech scientist Michael Day, CNBC cable anchor Bill Griffeth and community leader Irene Tovar during a Saturday, April 15 dinner and awards ceremony in the Roof Garden of the Sheraton Universal Hotel.

The 6:30 p.m. reception and 7:30 p.m. dinner/program, led by master of ceremonies Joe Rico of KNBC Channel 4, also will include presentation of the university's first-ever Emeriti Merit Award to Edmund Peckham, CSUN longtime dean of students and vice president of student affairs.

Tickets to the event are $65 per person or $600 for a table seating 10. For reservations and additional information, contact the CSUN Office of Alumni Relations at (818) 677-2137.

The Distinguished Alumni Awards are the highest honor bestowed by CSUN's Alumni Association, said Alumni Relations Director Gray Mounger. The awards recognize individuals who have distinguished themselves through achievements in their professional and personal lives.

Michael Day, B.S. '88 and M.S. '90 in Chemistry (top right), suffered an injury at age 18 that left him partially paralyzed. But the Encino resident went on to graduate from CSUN and become a faculty member at Caltech, director of its Beckman Institute Crystallography Laboratory, and an expert in the field.

Bill Griffeth, B.A. '80 in Journalism (top left), began his career writing for the Daily Sundial and doing broadcasts for KCSN radio. After graduation, he anchored for the Financial News Network (FNN) in Santa Monica, and after a 1991 merger, became an anchor at CNBC, hosting several award-winning programs.

Irene Tovar, B.A. '69 in Sociology (bottom right), is the executive director of the Latin American Civic Association, which administers the largest Head Start program in the San Fernando Valley and runs several housing and social service programs. She also serves as an officer on the board of the CSUN Alumni Association.

Edmund Peckham (bottom left) came to Northridge in 1967 as dean of student activities and housing at what then was San Fernando Valley State College. A longtime campus figure, he became dean of students in 1969 and vice president of student affairs in 1985 before retiring in 1991.

WASC Accreditation Team to Hold Campus Forums

Students, Faculty and Staff Will Have Opportunity to Discuss CSUN Self-Study

Cal State Northridge faculty, staff and students are invited to participate in one of five open forums in early April to offer their input as the university undergoes the final step of its re-accreditation process.

Members of the Western Association of Schools and Colleges' (WASC) evaluation team will be on campus during the first week of April to talk to the campus community and determine if the self-study CSUN has prepared during the past two years is a true reflection of the campus.

The self-study is an assessment of how well faculty, staff and students believe the university is doing its job.

"The evaluation team represents a wide range of experience in higher education. Their visit will give us an opportunity to have external experts give their opinion of how far we've come, and offer some guidance with our future planning," said Margaret Fieweger, associate vice president for undergraduate studies and CSUN's liaison to the WASC process.

Five forums are scheduled in early April so members of the WASC team can talk to the campus community:

- Students will have a chance to offer their input in the accreditation process from 1 to 2 p.m. Wednesday, April 5, or from 10 to 11 a.m. Thursday, April 6.
- Faculty will get a chance to talk with the WASC team from 3 to 4 p.m. Wednesday, April 5, or from 11 a.m. to noon Thursday, April 6.
- Staff will have an opportunity to meet with the accreditation team from 1 to 2 p.m. Thursday, April 6.

More than 60 people from throughout the campus have been meeting regularly for more than two years collecting data for the university's self-study.

For the first time, the review is examining how the university fares on three self-selected themes-student achievement, assessment and the utilization of technology-rather than the nine standards WASC has traditionally used to measure institutions during accreditation.

The change was at WASC's request, and thus far, team members have indicated they have been impressed with the university's self-study.

A copy of the final draft of the CSUN self-study is available for review on the Internet at www.csun.edu/~wascreac/.

Copies also are available in the Oviatt Library, the president's office and in each department chair's office.

"The self-study is a snapshot of where the university has been and laying the groundwork for the future," Fieweger said. "We encourage faculty, staff and students to join in the conversation about our future with the WASC team."
WASC, one of six regional accrediting associations in the country, evaluates schools, colleges and universities in California, Hawaii, Guam and the U.S. Pacific Island territories. CSUN was first accredited in 1960 and was re-accredited in 1980 and again in 1990.

CSUN
CSUN Students Host International Animation Festival

Four-Day Program to Bring Animators from Around the World to Screen Their Works and Compete for Awards

Artists from around the world will gather at Cal State Northridge in early April to display the latest in traditional, computer and experimental animation.

The third annual California SUN International Animation Festival, a CSUN student-organized event, will take place April 6-9 at the university, with additional screenings at the Museum of Television and Radio in Beverly Hills.

The four-day program features animation from independents, animation studios and aspiring student animators representing a wide range of countries, including Russia, Poland, the Czech Republic, Hungary, Brazil, Canada, Germany, Syria, Israel, Korea, New Zealand, the United Kingdom and the United States.

"The idea for an animation festival of international scale evolved over a period of years," said CSUN art professor Jack Reilly, the festival's director and organizer of the university's annual "Video Jam."

"I would see the students' excitement when we produced the shows. The audience would cheer aloud for the outrageous videos we screened. It finally dawned on me, 'Imagine what a quality event we can produce with animation from around the world.'"

Reilly said the festival "provides an entertaining yet valuable learning experience for students of animation, while also contributing a major showcase of exciting new work in animation to the university, the San Fernando Valley and the Hollywood/ Los Angeles animation community."

The screening schedule is as follows:

- Thursday, April 6, 6 to 10 p.m. in the University Student Union theater on the east side of campus.
- Friday, April 7, 6:30 to 9 p.m. at the Museum of Television and Radio in Beverly Hills, an invitation-only reception, awards presentation and screening for participating animators, sponsors, press and animation industry executives.
- Saturday, April 8, 7 to 11 p.m. in the University Student Union theater.
- Sunday, April 9, noon to 6 p.m. in the Performing Arts Center in the University Student Union.

Tickets are $10 per day for general admission and $7.50 per day for students. Tickets are available at the CSUN Box Office at (818) 677-2488. Tickets also will be available at the door one hour prior to a scheduled screening. Tickets cover admission to all screenings during a particular day.
Among this year's festival sponsors are POP.com; Imagine Entertainment and DreamWorks SKG's new Internet entertainment company created to produce and broadcast original Internet-only programming; EVEO.com, a privately held independent video network that encourages web users to produce and premiere original short digital videos; Animation Magazine; RealGoodMovies.com; Animation World Network (AWN.com), and FotoKem Film and Video.

The festival is produced by Vidimation Ink., a CSUN Associated Students organization, and the CSUN Department of Art, with partial funding from a grant by the university's Entertainment Industry Institute and additional funds raised by Vidimation Ink.

For more information, contact Jack Reilly at (818) 382-4545, or e-mail him at jack.reilly@csun.edu. For the latest festival information, visit its web site at www.csun.edu/animate.
