More Than 1,000 Expected to Join CSUN's AIDS Walk Team

Annual Fall Event Highlights University's Contribution to the Community

For Dijlah Benjamin, a recent Cal State Northridge graduate and current employee, taking part in this year's AIDS Walk is personal. Though she does not know anyone with acquired immune deficiency syndrome or who is HIV-positive, the purpose behind the walk still hits home.

"I've tried to put myself in the position of the millions of people who do have this disease," she said. "They need support. We are all human, we are all brothers and sisters."

Benjamin will be joining more than 1,000 CSUN students, faculty, staff and alumni on Sunday, October 15, in the annual AIDS Walk Los Angeles. Each year more than 26,000 people walk to raise awareness of AIDS and HIV and to raise funds for client services to help those with the disease.

"I am really looking forward to seeing this year's effort. It's always an enormously gratifying experience for me to participate in this," said Amy Reichbach, a health educator at CSUN who is the university's team leader for the walk.

"Students enjoy seeing university faculty and staff participating. It shows by example that we are committed to helping our community," said Reichbach. "The competition among student clubs and organizations doesn't hurt either in contributing to our participation as a campus," she added.

Fred Strache, CSUN interim vice president for student affairs, said the AIDS Walk has become a CSUN fall tradition. "It's the way we start the university's year, with people from across the campus community all participating in a very worthwhile cause. And it gives a chance for all of us to be more aware of what is still a major, major threat - AIDS," Strache said.

Meanwhile, Benjamin's contribution to CSUN's AIDS Walk team is not limited to just walking on October 15. Benjamin, a business administration graduate from last June who now works for Pulse, a university copying center, designed the team's T-shirt (right). She also designed last year's CSUN T-shirt.

"I had one design all set," Benjamin said of this year's shirt, "but then I woke up one morning and knew I had to change it. The new design has two people, symbolizing how people working together on a project can accomplish so much more. That's what the AIDS Walk is all about-making people realize that it's not just one person's concern, but everyone's concern."

Registration is still available for this year's AIDS Walk. To join Team CSUN, call x3683 or sign up online at www.csun.edu/~shecenter/aidswalk00.html.
University Relations Becomes University Advancement

Division Also Launches New Package of Stylish and Informative Web Pages

The University Relations Division at Cal State Northridge is taking on a new name and look for the fall semester, with a name change to University Advancement to better reflect its heightened focus on fund raising, and the launch of a stylish and informative new package of division web pages.

The name change to the University Advancement Division takes effect immediately and was recommended by CSUN President Jolene Koester for several reasons. The change to advancement brings CSUN's terminology into line with those of the fund-raising/external relations entities at the CSU Chancellor's Office and most other Cal State campuses.

In addition, the switch to advancement will help highlight the division's increased emphasis on improving fund raising, one of the president's major priorities for the coming years. "The emphasis in this division is now definitely in that direction," said Dick Tyler, CSUN's interim vice president of university advancement.

All of the existing departments within the newly named University Advancement Division will remain intact with their current names: Alumni Relations, Community Relations-Calendar, Development, Public Relations and the CSUN Foundation. The new division name will be phased into stationary, business cards and other existing materials over time.

Meanwhile, coinciding with the name change is the launch of a new University Advancement Division home page on the Internet and new web pages for each of the division's departments. The new division home page is located at www.csun.edu/~univrel/, and includes easy links to all of the departmental home pages within the division.

Following the recent redesign of the university's main home web page and related pages, the University Advancement Division undertook a major overhaul of its web presence in recent months, adopting a new and consistent division-wide graphic design for the pages and adding new information content online in many areas.

"We've been working extensively on all of our web pages with the goal of making them more user-friendly, helpful and attractive," Tyler said. The process was guided by a committee of University Advancement staff members led by Veronica Grant, Tyler's administrative assistant, and used the expertise of web design consultant Sunita Vira of Innovative Concepts. Other committee members included John Chandler, Trish Fair, Janet Sennewald, Diana Sistos and Shellie Smith.

For example in Public Relations, www.csun.edu/~pubrels/, new content includes the first use of streaming video of campus-related activities, a gallery of campus event photography, individual pages on campus highlights, service to the community and prominent alumni, and links to campus statistics, bios of top administrators and profiles of recent...

The newly launched online Campus Calendar is also reachable through the Community Relations Department's new home page at www.csun.edu/~commrel/. University community members hosting events can submit them online for inclusion in the calendar, and others can check the calendar days or weeks ahead for upcoming events.

Matadors to Play 2001 Season in North Campus Stadium

One-Year Extension Means an Extra Season at Home for Football and Soccer

Cal State Northridge will continue to play its home football and soccer contests in the university's North Campus Stadium during the 2001 season prior to the planned demolition of the three-decade-old complex, Athletic Director Dick Dull announced.

The decision means the sports will have one extra year in the long-standing campus facility before moving to a new venue. CSUN officials continue to plan for the use of the stadium at nearby Pierce College in Woodland Hills once CSUN's North Campus Stadium is demolished.

"As we looked more into the transition, two things became clear," Dull said. "First, there are many details about the future move that need time to be settled. Second, CSUN in fact has the ability to delay our stadium's demolition for a year without impairing other university plans."

The university's 6,500-seat North Campus Stadium—which first hosted Matador football in 1971—will still give way to a planned nine-acre expansion of the $70 million MiniMed biotech complex on CSUN's North Campus.

But CSUN's lease agreement for the MiniMed project gives the university through June 2002—well after the end of the 2001 football and soccer seasons—to complete the demolition. Thus, Dull recommended the one-year extension and CSUN President Jolene Koester accepted that plan.

"I am most happy for our players that we can stay one more year at the North Campus Stadium because that has been our home," said Matadors football coach Jeff Kearin. "I'm also happy for our fans, because they will be able to see some very good football on our home campus for another year."

CSUN athletics officials still have to settle some details regarding the future use of Pierce College's stadium, such as relocating CSUN's stadium scoreboard, the handling of different types of goal posts used in university as opposed to community college games, and other potential facilities modifications at Pierce.

CSUN is planning to share Pierce College's stadium in the coming years while reviewing the university's own campus athletic facilities needs. CSUN will have more flexibility in the sizing and other details of any future campus stadium because of athletics' affiliation with the Big West Conference beginning in mid-2001.
FYI

For Your Information publishes announcements of public meetings, notices, events, deadlines, classes and courses of interest to the university community. The deadline for submitting items generally is noon on Monday, one week before the issue appears. The deadline for the October 23 issue is Mon., October 16.

We strive to include all items submitted by deadline occurring during the two-week period until the next issue. Items further in advance will be run on a space-available basis. Submit future items by e-mailing them to pubinfo@exec.csun.edu, sending them to mail drop 8242 or faxing them to (818) 677-4909. E-mail is the preferred method of submitting.

Jewish Religious Holidays

The Provost's Office reminds the campus community that the major Jewish holidays occurring during the fall 2000 semester include Yom Kippur, which is sundown Sun., Oct. 8 to sundown Mon., Oct. 9. Many traditional orthodox and conservative Jewish students also will observe the religious festivals of Sukkot (Fri., Oct. 13 sundown to Sun., Oct. 15 sundown), Shemini Atzeret and Simchat Torah (Fri., Oct. 20 sundown to Sun., Oct. 22 sundown).

It is campus policy that "in administering any tests or examinations, we will permit any student who is eligible to undergo the test or examination to do so, without penalty, at a time when that activity would not violate the student's religious creed." The Provost's Office calls this policy to your attention and reminds faculty and staff of the responsibility to be sensitive to students' religious obligations as course deadlines and activities are scheduled.

International Faculty Partnership Conference

Applications to participate in the CSU International Faculty Partnership Conference are being solicited. Baden-Wurttemberg, Germany in June 2001 and California in September 2002 are the locations for the first pair of conferences. The theme is "The New Europe and the New California: Coexistence, Convergence, and Collision of Cultural Communities." Faculty from all disciplines are encouraged to participate. The conference hosts (Germany and the CSU) will pay the costs of participants' lodgings, meals and associated conference expenses. CSUN will pay the travel costs of up to two faculty members from CSUN (the maximum allowed from any single CSU campus). fmi-Heinrich Falk, x2138 or x3086.
