
This two-volume work offers access to more than 700 articles covering exploration and navigation research from a historical perspective. Detailed article entries, in alphabetical order, are biographical, geographical, and topical in nature, and discuss a wide range of global navigation and expedition topics pertinent to current scholarship. Coverage is not limited to geographic exploration alone, as many entries include information on scientific and naturalist expeditions. Every article is written and signed by a prominent scholar in the field of exploration studies. All entries offer further reading recommendations. Entries are cross-referenced, and illustrations include black-and-white maps and color plates. Many entries include additional excerpts from primary source materials such as travel reports, diaries, and personal letters. Summing Up: Recommended. All levels. -- L. Lampert, California State University--Northridge